Exemption 6, FOIA

5 USC 552(b)(6)

Dear U.S. Patent Office:

I am writing to complain about an invention promotion company that has taken $2000 of my money, and they want me to send them another $10,000 before they will promote my invention. The only information I have received from them is promotional information about selling my proposed invention and the contract agreement.

I checked with the Better Business Bureau web site and found the government has taken legal action against this company. The company name and address is Davison & Associates, 595 Alpha Drive, Pittsburgh PA 15238.

They have not sent me the required legal information:

“Disclose in writing the number of positive and negative evaluations of inventions they have given over a five-year period, and:

Disclose their customers’ success in receiving net financial profit and license agreements as a direct result of the invention promotion services.”

I would like to have my $2000 dollars returned to me. Enclosed is documentation showing I sent Davison & Assoc. $2000. I have enclosed a copy of a letter I am prepared to mail to them, but I thought I should go through your office first. The BBB states on their web site that your office has a complaint process set up for individuals who have been deceived by invention promoters.
